Immigrant and Native Minority Family Development, Neighborhood Transformation, and Welfare Reform in Miami and Los Angeles. Co-editor Abel Valenzuela. Under review by Russell Sage Foundation Press. While there are numerous studies of immigration and others of welfare reform, this analysis uniquely focuses on immigrant and minority family development and neighborhood transformation in specific low-income neighborhoods. Using longitudinal ethnographic data this study follows the lives and neighborhoods of sixty families over four years in Miami and Los Angeles. The volume will specifically focus on two themes: 1. structural racism and 2. family strengthening and erosion. Based upon research supported by MDRC.
